The Old Dominion

When Charles II Was King

OUR "Plymouth" Silver has proved itself a Colonial pattern of very broad application, harmonizing perfectly with most of the styles which are grouped comprehensively under the heading of Eighteenth Century silver. In perfection of form and quality it is fully comparable to the best plate made during the twelve years of Queen Anne's reign, the classic revival of the mid-Georgian era (1760 to 1820), and the work of American Silversmiths from 1650 onward.

But the "Old Dominion" line of silver which we are now bringing forward, and which has made a most profound impression wherever it has been seen, is more specifically a pattern, suggestive of the first forefathers of Virginia rather than those later Pilgrim and Puritan ancestors of Massachusetts Bay — a pattern aristocratic as well as utilitarian. It well deserves the title of Southern Colonial Silver.

It is impossible to do justice to its beauty here by any mere description or illustration; the various pieces must be seen. The design is wholly unique; a perfect specimen of beaded Colonial with a wonderful amount of spirit and refinement in its stately beauty. Old Dominion Silver conveys a distinct impression of the aristocracy of Virginia in the time of Washington.

We urge a personal examination of some of these pieces which we have on exhibition.
